The new drama UNDOCUMENTED opens at Burien Actors Theatre on August 19 and 21.

In the hush-hush world of the undocumented, a brush with police spins out of control...

UNDOCUMENTED, written by Seattle immigration lawyer Margaret O'Donnell, looks at the realities faced by one undocumented immigrant family in Seattle, brought into the glare of public attention after an arrest by police thrusts husband and father Fredy into immigration detention, facing deportation. He attempts to navigate not only the criminal justice system, but the torturously difficult immigration court system – with the life he has built for his family in this country at stake.

UNDOCUMENTED

Please share widely; the natural audience for the play is the public in general, who may be unfamiliar with the realities facing undocumented immigrants. Knowing can be the beginning of understanding...

Note: The cast and crew are enthusiastic about continuing to present the play; we are looking for other opportunities to produce it. We welcome inquiries from community groups, churches, and theatre companies. Please contact Margaret O'Donnell at modonnell@globallawadvocates.com.
